

Mr. David Liang

English Language Specialist

Master of Arts in English Literature
University of London

PROFILE

With an academic background in English Language and Culture, David is familiar with both linguistics and literature. Later he pursued a Master's degree in English Literature at the University of London. Not only did David acquire a deep understanding and appreciation for 19th and 20th century literature but he also specialised in Orientalism and World Literature. David brings his skills to the classroom to help his students study with enthusiasm. While laying down techniques for students to form robust, unique, and well-supported perspectives, he also guides students to develop their own ideas when reading literature. David is an ideal teacher for IB English A Literature, IB English A Language and Literature.
